It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Document No. 2705.
Office of Supervising Architect.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
Washington, D. C., February 12, 1914.

SIR: I have the honor to present herewith the annual report of the operations of this office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913.

The preparation of this report has been considerably delayed by the ever-increasing demands of the current work of the office.

In so far as the Office of the Supervising Architect is concerned, the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, was made conspicuous by three important developments: (1) The repeal of the so-called Tarsney Act; (2) the passage of a public buildings act; and (3) the creation, in the latter, of the so-called Public Buildings Commission.

REPEAL OF THE TARSNEY ACT.

The Tarsney Act, which provided for the employment of private architects by the Treasury Department and which was approved February 20, 1893, was repealed in the sundry civil act, approved August 24, 1912 (37 Stat., 428).

It is to be regretted that at the time this act was repealed, no consideration was given to the fact that, under proper control, the private architect may render very valuable assistance to the Government in the design and construction of public buildings. Its repeal should not, as it does, place the architectural profession under a ban.

Since the repeal of the Tarsney Act many suggestions have been made looking toward a renewed participation in public work on the part of the private architect. One of these is that every building costing $250,000 or over should be designed by a private architect; another is that the entire work in the Office of the Supervising Architect should be distributed among private architects; another contemplates the creation of a department of public works, which would take over not only the Office of the Supervising Architect but also the other offices and bureaus in the other departments engaged in building construction; and various other suggestions have been made.

The suggestion to employ only private architects for public buildings costing $250,000 and over is not understood. Why this arbitrary limit should have been established does not appear. As a matter of fact, if the private architect is to be employed to assist in raising the standard of public building work, his services would be most effective in connection with the smaller buildings. These structures are, necessarily, erected in the smaller cities and towns; they are, generally, the most important of the local buildings; they are, taken together, seen daily by thousands of persons who have but little opportunity to feel the influence of the great architectural works in the large cities, and their collective potentiality for aiding in the development of a national appreciation of the beautiful is great.

To divide up among the private architects of this country the present gigantic volume of public building authorizations would, it is believed, merely create a condition of confusion. The following up of the simultaneous preparation of plans for public buildings distributed in private offices all over the country would be an administrative task of the first order, not to mention the delay and cost. Further, it would lead to the introduction of a confusing variety of methods and processes, whereas the desideratum should be a standardization of these methods and processes. Were the Government erecting only an occasional public building the method proposed would be the evident thing, but with the great number of authorizations, especially for smaller buildings, it is necessary to centralize the work in order to administer it with a reasonable efficiency and a reasonable economy.

There has been introduced in the Senate a bill (S. 3063, 63d Cong., 1st sess.) providing for the discretionary employment of private architects in a consulting capacity to assist the Supervising Architect. Upon this bill this department has rendered a favorable report. If enacted into law it would leave the control of the work in the office of the Supervising Architect, who would be responsible for the carrying out of the public building program and the development of all the practical elements which enter into its administration, but would permit of the employment of consulting architects to assist in the field of architectural design and in the supervision of the construction of buildings referred to the Supervising Architect. This, after all, is the thing the Tarsney Act was intended to accomplish, and it is believed that it is the thing in which the thoughtful architects of this country are seriously interested. That it is a practical scheme has already been demonstrated. The mode of procedure proposed by this contemplated legislation was that finally adopted by the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds in the design and construction of the Office Buildings for the Senate and House of Representatives. That it worked successfully in the case of these two buildings is a matter of history, and that it could be adapted to the work of the Supervising Architect would seem a reasonable assumption.

Should Congress grant the proposed authority to employ consulting architects, it would of course be necessary to subject this employment to a rigid censorship. That an architect is successful in private practice is no evidence that he is competent to design and supervise the erection of a public building. To distribute the work among private architects, merely because they are private architects, would not in itself be any advantage to the Government.

The consulting architects employed under the terms of the proposed legislation should be selected without competition, and should be only those who have demonstrated that they possess ability, refined by training and experience.

While the method proposed in the contemplated legislation, to which reference is made above, may not be the final solution of what is conceded to be a problem of national importance, it is believed that it is worthy of a serious trial, and the passage of this legislation is strongly recommended.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS ACT.

The total authorizations carried in the public buildings act, approved March, 4, 1913, excluding all work not placed under the control of the Treasury Department, amounted to $41,797,350. The above total comprises the following authorizations:

Increases in limits of cost of buildings authorized in previous acts.....	72
New buildings authorized to be constructed on sites authorized in previous acts..	133
New sites and buildings.....	171
New sites only.....	132
Extensions to existing buildings, etc.....	23
Total projects.....	531

At the date of the passage of this act, this office had but recently commenced work on the projects authorized in the prior public buildings act, approved June 25, 1910.

As a result of the condition described the volume of authorized work not as yet under contract at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, was the greatest in the history of this office.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS COMMISSION.

The public buildings act of March 4, 1913, created the so-called Public Buildings Commission, composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster General, the Attorney General, two members of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the Senate, and two members of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the House. This commission is instructed to prepare, with the aid of the Supervising Architect, and present to Congress a connected scheme involving annual appropriations for the construction, in a reasonable time, of all public buildings heretofore authorized, as well as to frame a standard, or standards, by which the size and cost of public buildings shall, as far as practicable, be determined. In addition, this commission is charged with the duty of reporting on the adaptability of the buildings already authorized to the requirements of the several communities in which they are to be located and, also, whether existing appropriations should be increased or diminished.

In view of the duties imposed upon it by Congress, it would be invidious for me at this time to submit any recommendations concerning the matters referred to the Public Buildings Commission. The hope may be expressed in passing, however, that the report of the commission to Congress will discuss thoroughly the two mooted questions of the so-called "standardization of buildings" and the claim that the public buildings erected under the direction of the Supervising Architect cost appreciably more than similar buildings erected by municipalities, by county and State governments, and by private individuals. The reports of the debates in the House and Senate show that there is a great diversity of opinion among Members of Congress on these two subjects, and that they are matters of frequent discussion. It is believed that it is due this office that Congress be authoritatively informed of the limitations of the scheme of "standardization" and, also, whether the Supervising Architect is actually to be charged with fostering extravagant methods of building construction.

That this office welcomes the most searching investigation of its methods that the Public Buildings Commission may care to undertake need hardly be stated. If undertaken with a full realization of the fact that it is necessarily dealing with a highly complicated and technical machinery the result can not but be helpful.

OFFICE OF THE SUPERVISING ARCHITECT.

There are many matters affecting the welfare of this office that are not explicitly referred to the consideration of the Public Buildings Commission by the legislation which created it, although they all have more or less bearing upon framing standards for future authorizations. The most important of these matters, as I view them, is that of organization, both in the office and in the field.

ORGANIZATION.

The Office of the Supervising Architect is at present expending approximately $22,000,000 annually in real estate, in the construction of new buildings, in extensions to completed buildings, and in the repair, maintenance, and operation of occupied buildings. This is about 50 per cent more than the annual disbursements of the Government of the District of Columbia. Included in the "operation" of completed buildings is the direction of the custodians' force, now numbering approximately 4,000 persons in over 800 buildings scattered throughout the country. This force comprises the assistant custodians, janitors, engineers, mechanics, laborers, charwomen, etc. This vast work is under the direction of a mere skeleton organization, consisting of but 13 supervisory officials (including the Supervising Architect) and 6 assistants.

The office force of the Supervising Architect in Washington consisted, at the close of the year ending June 30, 1913, of 253 employees (slightly more than the personnel of the entire Department of State in Washington and but slightly less than the personnel of the Department of Justice in Washington). The force in the field, at the same date, consisted of 103 employees, a total personnel of 356.

The contention that the Office of the Supervising Architect has a mere skeleton organization may be demonstrated by a comparison of it with the organizations of technical bureaus and offices in other departments.

The effect of attempting to manage so vast and complicated a business with so small a supervisory personnel is a lessening of efficiency all along the line. The pressure of current work is so great and the demands upon the various resources of the office continue to increase at such a rate that those responsible for its conduct have no time to study its various problems and work out economies. At times, matters of serious moment must be passed upon with less attention than they are entitled to.

Because of the present limited supervisory personnel, the head of the office is overburdened with detail. He has no assistants among whom a part of this responsibility could be distributed, as both the executive officer and the technical officer have specific duties of their own. As a result, matters of the first importance must be neglected in order to give attention to the pressing details of the moment and the Supervising Architect has no opportunity for original work.

The organization in the field is believed to be ill-adapted to the needs of a system which is charged with the simultaneous construction of buildings, not only in virtually every State in the Union, but in Alaska, Porto Rico, and Hawaii as well. At present every detail is handled from Washington. This is a cumbersome system, and results in long and vexatious delays. It is believed that the country should be divided into construction districts; that a properly paid and competent official with a sufficient office force should be placed in charge of each district, and that he should attend to all the detail work. This he can handle much more effectively on the spot than it can be managed by correspondence with Washington.

SALARY OF TECHNICAL EMPLOYEES.

The rate of salary of the technical employees in the Office of the Supervising Architect is not only less than is paid in private offices for the same character of service, but is less than is paid in other of the bureaus and offices of the Government. The result of this is that technically-trained men are continually leaving the service to accept more remunerative positions elsewhere. This means that private employers ultimately reap the benefit of the training given these employees by the Government. This is distinctly a losing proposition. Further, the place of each man who leaves must be filled by a recruit who, in turn, must be trained. This places an added burden on the chiefs of divisions, already taxed to the limit by the current work of the office. All such added duties are, of course, a dead loss. The net result of this entire situation, from the administrative point of view, is a constantly shifting personnel, in which a standard of achievement is maintained with the greatest difficulty.

The disparity between the salaries permissible to technical employees in this office and the salaries paid in certain of the other branches of the Government is an inevitable cause of discontent. A man who has devoted years of service to the Government, who has proven his ability to discharge important technical duties, and who is constantly given work of very considerable responsibility is debarred, by statute, from obtaining a technical position with the Interstate Commerce Commission, for instance, at a greater salary than received at present, while preference is given to the man from outside, whose ability to meet the peculiar requirements of Government employ has not been tested. This, from the point of view of the man in the service, amounts to a discrimination with which one is constrained to sympathize, although without any desire to question the wisdom of Congress in fixing the limitation referred to. Nevertheless, the effect may not be ignored. The man in the service is discouraged, he feels that the Government service does not offer him a career, and he accepts employment elsewhere whenever tendered him.

ACCUMULATION OF FILES.

The accumulation of files of drawings of completed buildings is becoming a serious question. Each set of these drawings is not only the official record of the work, but must be referred to whenever repairs, changes, or extensions are required. Inasmuch as this office is completing about 75 buildings a year, the accumulation rapidly increases in bulk. All these files are "active." A change may be required in a building but a year old, and an extension may be authorized to one 25 years old. These files, therefore, are in constant use and must be near at hand. At present they are stored under the sloping roof of the west side of the building in a manner that is peculiarly inaccessible. Even now these meager facilities are overtaxed. The only appropriation available for the purchase of a filing equipment—"General expenses of public buildings"—is no more than sufficient to meet the other demands made upon it, so that all these valuable records must remain not only scattered on floors and tables and difficult of access, but subject constantly to destruction by fire and vermin.

The Office of the Supervising Architect covers about three-fourths of the area of the Treasury Building in the fourth, or attic, story. Spread out laterally as they are, the various divisions are widely separated, and communication is expensive in the time it requires. During the last year an intercommunicating telephone system was installed, which has not only been most successful in operation, but has been a large time saver in the transaction of official business. The transfer of papers, drawings, etc., between divisions, etc., remains a problem not yet solved. The incoming and outgoing mail of this office now amounts to over 1,300 pieces a day, not including memoranda and references. The handling and distributing of this matter, the handling of matter withdrawn from the files, and the handling of hundreds of blue prints issued daily, is a considerable tax upon the facilities of the organization. It is thought that a pneumatic-tube system for the handling of mail matter, and papers of similar size, would greatly facilitate work. The appropriation for "General expenses" would be available for the installation of such a system, but, as in the case of the files, it is too heavily drawn upon for other purposes.

REPAIRS AND PRESERVATION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

One of the growing problems of the public-building work is the rapidly increasing number of completed buildings to be maintained in repair. These now number considerably over 800, representing a construction investment of over $175,000,000.

Much difficulty is encountered in determining an equitable distribution of the appropriation vouchsafed for this purpose each year by Congress. For information regarding conditions which actually exist, the office must depend, mainly, upon the initiative of custodians. Certain of the custodians give the needs of their buildings close attention, resulting in numerous requisitions for repairs; others, apparently, are more easy-going, and but few are technically trained in the physical care of structures. Again, the majority of the custodians are officials of another department; they draw no pay from this department, as custodians, and act as such, generally, because they can not evade that obligation.

The reports of custodians are supplemented, to a degree, by the reports of superintendents of construction occasionally detailed to inspect special repairs, and by the reports of inspectors charged with the oversight of mechanical equipment or maintenance. This means of obtaining information is, of course, more or less uncertain.

Some months ago there was sent each custodian a blank form, in which he was required to enter a detailed statement of the condition of the building under his charge. No means existed for checking the accuracy of the returns, but they indicated the necessity, or desirability, of repairs which would have required the expenditure of an additional sum approximately equal to the available appropriation.

The condition described above must continue until this office is permitted to employ a force of inspectors of repairs whose sole duty shall be the inspection of the physical condition of completed buildings. When this service is instituted it will be possible to collect complete data and map out each year's expenditure according to requirements which will be known in advance. No other system will correct the faults of the present method of allotting this appropriation.

MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The expenditure of the appropriation for mechanical equipment of public buildings is surrounded with less difficulty than that for repairs. The construction of new buildings necessitates the employment of inspectors of mechanical equipment, and they, to an extent, examine into the condition of the equipment in the completed buildings. The insufficiency of this force, however, renders this service less complete than it should be, and an increased inspection force would be of the greatest assistance in collecting data on which to base a more systematic expenditure of this appropriation.

Notwithstanding the difficulty experienced in ascertaining the true conditions in many buildings, the mechanical equipment in the occupied buildings may be said to be in good shape. In recent years much antiquated and uneconomical apparatus has been replaced by modern installations, and in a number of buildings savings have been effected by the installation of isolated generating plants.

OPERATING FORCE FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

This appropriation, formerly known as "Pay of assistant custodians and janitors," has been under the control of this office since October 1, 1910, having been transferred from the office of the chief clerk of the Treasury Department. Every effort has been made, within the limits of the available appropriation, to standardize wages, regulate hours of work on an equitable basis, and generally improve the service. Much remains to be done, but the possibilities in the directions noted depend absolutely upon the appropriations made by Congress.

It is not believed that the other "annual" appropriations disbursed by this office call for any particular comment.

BUILDINGS FROM PLANS BY PRIVATE ARCHITECTS.

At the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, the following buildings were under construction from the plans of private architects selected under the terms of the Tarsney Act before its repeal:

San Francisco, Cal., subtreasury, J. Milton Dyer, architect.

Waukegan, Ill., post office, Wyatt & Nolting, architects.

At the same date the following buildings, to be erected from plans of private architects selected under the terms of the Tarsney Act before its repeal, had not been placed under contract:

Boonville, Mo., post office, Richards, McCarty & Bulford, architects.

Honolulu, Hawaii, post office, courthouse, and customhouse, York & Sawyer, architects.

New Haven, Conn., post office, James Gamble Rogers, architect.

At the same date the following buildings, from plans of private architects selected under the terms of special legislation, were under construction:

Boston, Mass., customhouse, Peabody & Stearns, architects.

The post-office building at Bristol, Pa., placed under contract March 6, 1913, is being constructed from the plans of Messrs. Heacock & Hokanson, architects, of Philadelphia, Pa., these plans having been donated to the Treasury Department by Mr. Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol, Pa.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS UNDER THE CONTROL OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

STATEMENT OF BUILDINGS OCCUPIED, IN COURSE OF CONSTRUCTION, AND AUTHORIZED, INCLUDING SITES, ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY, IN TWO DIVISIONS.

DIVISION A.—Statement of legislative authorizations and appropriations, with notes relative to the acquisition of sites, the progress of the work, and other pertinent features. (Associated with Division B by corresponding location numbers.)

DIVISION B.—Statement of expenditures for buildings—construction and annual repairs, etc.—and sites, showing outstanding obligations and balances, with notes as to surplus fund deposits, and other features. (Associated with Division A by corresponding location numbers.)

MEMORANDA.

1. For separate classification of buildings, by titles, showing in the aggregate the expenditures, etc., for each class, see Addenda following Divisions A and B.

2. The star (*) in the column embracing expenditures for construction (Division B) indicates the original cost of the completed building. Other figures in this column represent work in progress or incomplete projects.

3. In the case of sites purchased under the act of May 30, 1908, and subsequent acts, the dates given in the column "Date of purchase" (Division B) are those upon which the Treasury warrants in payment for said sites were delivered to the vendors. Title is vested in the United States upon these dates.

4. In connection with some of the very old buildings, and with reference to a number of quarantine stations, including also a few lots of ground, the specific legislative authorizations, if any, are difficult of ascertainment. Sites were purchased, and buildings erected, in the earlier days, in some instances, at the expense of general appropriations, and hence no separate legislative record exists of these. Such data as is obtainable relative to these items is given in Division A.
